

A NARRATION ABOUT A FUTURE

Abstract

The author of the article, through a cross-sectional analysis of the most famous studies on forecasts about the predicted future of humanity and the current civilization, makes a Meta theoretical narrative that indicates the multidimensional essence of the described problems. At the same time, through own comments in conjunction with examples from incl. the work of L.R. Brown, the Reports of the Club of Rome or the Polish Committee of Prognoses Polska 2000 Plus, the author shapes the view that we actually know everything that needs to be done, but one can get the impression that we are acting contrary to this knowledge, because we continue to repeat the same mistakes regarding human qualitative development and the use of natural resources and even more so to protect the ecosystem. In conclusion, the author outlines alternative forecasts for the development of the new socio-economic order.

Keywords: meta theoretical narrative, forecasts in political science, new socio-economic order.

JEL Codes: F50