

System Solutions in Correlations Between Ecological Safety and Health Safety of Poland

Abstract:

The existence of a correlation between the sector of ecological and health safety is undeniable. The state of the natural environment determines human health, and thus the whole of its being. As shown in the article, the understanding of these implications in a systemic manner guarantees the completeness and cohesion of the evaluation of the national security system of the Republic of Poland. These security sectors should be recognized as a network of interconnections, so that the implementation of strategic assumptions will translate into the effective development of the entire state.
