

THE PLACE OF THE POLISH BORDER GUARD IN THE STATE SECURITY SYSTEM AND THE TYPOLOGY DISPOSITIONAL GROUPS

Summary

Sociology of dispositional groups deals with organized structures prepared to react quickly to prevent or eliminate hazards. Dispositional groups operate in the military, paramilitary and civil state security system.

Like the Armed Forces (the Army), the Border Guard have been classified into the military system, even though it is a paramilitary service. The article is a polemic with this state of affairs and the correction of this inaccuracy. It is also a proposal to adopt more unambiguous criteria for the qualification of dispositional groups to particular security systems and to base its typology on the statutes of the said groups resulting from the legal regulations which define the nature, organization and functions of particular groups resulting from the currently existing threats.
